

H1N1

How Much Will It Cost Your Business?

Now is the time to ensure your company is prepared to handle the current H1N1 Flu Pandemic.

Does your current library of policies include a planned response for handling the current H1N1 Flu Pandemic?

What will happen to your business if several of your employees are at home sick at the same time?

What if one of your employees contracts the flu and insists on staying at work?

What will you do if employees don't want to work alongside an employee who appears to have flu symptoms?

The policies you have in place may not be sufficient when facing the issues surrounding a Health Crisis such as the H1N1 Flu Pandemic.

Be prepared to handle the above situations, and any other possible scenarios the H1N1 Flu Pandemic will present, with a Health Crisis Policy. A functional policy can enforce preventative measures that protect your employees from becoming ill and ensure your business continues to operate with minimal disruption.

As seen with SARS and the Avian Flu, individuals today are dealing with a variety of challenging Health Crisis outbreaks more than ever before, with less time in between each crisis, and the effects becoming more widespread. The cost to your business of not having a proactive policy to handle the impact of these situations can be extensive and far-reaching.

Workplace Matters can assist you in designing a Health Crisis Policy to match your specific business requirements. If you already have a policy, we can work with you to ensure your existing policy is up to date and effective. In either case, you will have a concrete plan of action for handling the impact of this current Health Crisis. It will also provide a proactive framework to use for future health outbreaks.

Having a Health Crisis Policy offers the following benefits:

- ✓ Shows that you are proactive about protecting employees and their health.
- ✓ Ensures you are prepared in the event of numerous employee absences.
- ✓ Aligns your business with Governmental Regulations, such as privacy laws, and protects against possible liabilities.
- ✓ Minimizes the impact on your business operations, including service and supply disruptions, until the crisis has passed.
- ✓ Provides an organized framework for you to work with now and one to use when preparing for a similar crisis that may impact your business in the future.
- ✓ Ensures you maintain a positive work environment where employees continue to operate as a team and productivity stays on track.
